

Future of “Social Network”

Once the opportunity load matches takes place, we could employ the following ideas to get the job on the single app tracker.

Play a game to get a Job - A game can be connected to the app to identify the player's interests in a fun way, further to hack career impact factor.

Bird's eye view of an employer - Employers list job specifications instead of listing key activities involved in the job. A routine based resume would hold excellent when employer's perspectives of hiring changes as it can be a best fit with the available interests/passion. This will be termed as the future of app's vision.

Collaborative Consumption workspace - Working together till you get a job holds good for entry level grads who are seeking out for "the best fit job" They get a variety of choices to work on and choose the one that matches the best. In the meanwhile update their resumes based on the experience gained.

Creating a personal USP - Everyone has a talent and if one creates a personal USP (Unique Selling Proposition), he/she can sell themselves to the job market. Freelancers are the best example. Following our passion/interests can help us achieve our destined goals as success in one's life has various meanings. Encouraging youngsters to follow their passion/interests that can sell to the world as a service/product.

The future of DailyO is to collaborate with employers to define jobs that are specific to youth who are using social media every minute to send or receive information. Why not change the hiring process when the stakeholders are impacted by social media? A hiring process that can pick candidates based on passion matches!
