

WHO WE ARE

We are an international, humanitarian nonprofit organization that engages multidimensional approaches, grounded in depth psychology, to alleviate human suffering.

We directly engage under-served, post-disaster, and post-conflict communities, support humanitarian workers and generate actionable insights to enable individual and community healing. We work in depth, in the field.

WHAT WE DO

1/ ENGAGE COMMUNITIES DIRECTLY

We engage communities directly first, by listening, and then by co-creating multidimensional psychological and social support activities, whether inside or outside a formal mental-health context.

2/ SUPPORT HUMANITARIAN WORKERS

We support humanitarian workers to strengthen the impact of their contributions by providing a three-part program that includes: preparatory Compassion and Resiliency Training, psychosocial support and stress assessment throughout their time in the field, and optional therapeutic services to facilitate successful re-entry.

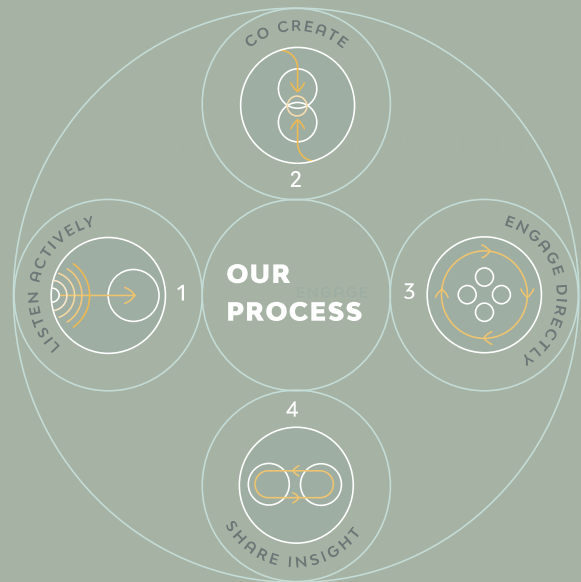

3/ GENERATE ACTIONABLE INSIGHTS

We provide opportunities for generating actionable insights into the manifold root causes of human suffering today, through quantitative and qualitative research, curated discussion and debate, and through innovative community and professional education.

HOW WE DO IT

At Stillpoint Engage, we believe that suffering can only be alleviated when human beings truly connect across all the boundaries that too often separate us. Our engagement process is based on respect, collaboration, shared vision, & reflection.

We invite you to listen, learn, and partner with us and our diverse constellation of friends, innovators and conscientious leaders. Together we can reimagine our shared future with depth, and humanity.

1 | LISTEN ACTIVELY

We join our stakeholders in the field for a session of active listening to understand the deeper needs and manifold causes of suffering.

2 | CO-CREATE

We work with our community to co-create, map and plan a collaborative process grounded in depth psychology.

3 | ENGAGE DIRECTLY

We engage our community directly in a series of workshops that enable multi-dimensional approaches to healing.

4 | SHARE INSIGHTS

We take time to digest, capture and share our experiences to distill our learnings and inspire future projects.
