Dear Mr. James Thrupp,

I, undersigned Lori Giver, in my capacity of Vice President of Research and Development at Calysta, would express our interest in ALLFED's strategic goal of a catastrophe resilient food system for South Australia.

We support ALLFED's goals to:

- Create a long-termist culture fostering practices that safeguard humanity
- Create a regionally specific food system resilience assessment for South Australia and strategic template document for other resilient regions
- Develop regional food network partners such as community, academia, policy, government actors
- Obtain funding to develop an ecosystem of resilient food knowledge and industry in South Australia
- Create a disaster resilient systems research schools
- Create an incubator to develop resilient food and associated technologies
- Create a database of resilient foods to scale up in resilient cities around the world

We would be interested in collaborating with ALLFED to understand if Adelaide in South Australia, or indeed any subsequent resilient regions, could be a suitable area for research, innovation or expansion.

Yours sincerely,

Lori Giver, Ph.D.
VP, R&D
