

Zero to Five Challenge: MAP (Market and Park) Alliance for Kids

The children's park idea is much broader than the MAP Alliance prototype. These links provide more context for the Playtime in Africa Initiative

- Accra's Mmofra Foundation Puts Children at the Center of Urban Design: Urbanist Victoria Okoye speaks with Playtime in Africa team leader Amowi Phillips.
- Children Fight For Space To Play In An Overcrowded City: Looking for solutions to rare public recreational space on Next City's Informal Dialogues.
- Playtime in Africa Student Report: Prof. Kofi Boone and Students from NC State University report on their 2014 International Design Study Abroad program with Mmofra Foundation.
- The Power of We maps the improbable journey of this idea over the last three years.
- Championing greenspace via social media - the first ever Tweetchat on parks in Ghana, hosted by Mmofra Foundation and African Urbanist
- Imagining a Better Future – Playtime in Africa: Major preview of the project from Playgroundology, including images from Efua Sutherland's original book.
- Architecture for Humanity Fellows Attend Charrette in Accra: Stacey McMahan and Ken Smith join urban Ghanaians in conversation on Play and Urban Space.
- Designing Cities with Children in Mind: Playtime in Africa team leaders Amowi Phillips and Rachel Phillips write about the philosophy of the project for ThisBigCity.
- The Enabling City Volume Two by Chiara Camponeschi features this project.